The Conviction and Sentence of Tweed.

William M. Tweed, the greatest public robber of modern times, having at last been convicted, received his sentence on Saturday afternoon of last week. The closing scene in this great legal drama is described in a metropolitan daily as "one that will live in the judicial annals of this country as long as the trial of Warren Hastings shall survive in the memory of Englishmen or the parliamentary records of Great Britain. In all the crowded and intelligent audience that packed the court-room from ten o'clock in the morning until after four o'clock in the afternoon there was not one who could fail to be impressed with this exhibition of the majesty and power of the law, which, although it encompassed its victim without noise or demonstration, still bound him as firmly and dragged him onward to his doom as certainly as though, as in the old days, its grip had been of literal iron and his footsteps had echoed the clanging of a load of chains."

The Graphic pen-picture depicts the central figure of the scene, William Marcey Tweed, his features and his attitude proclaiming him a broken—almost a hopeless—old man. His attitude betokened that he felt himself engulfed by the bitter waters of humiliation, and that he knew himself defenceless; he made no stand or fight against his fate, but on the other hand he allowed himself to make no demonstration of despair, and showed that he had been forced from his attitude of defiance only as far as passiveness and not to desperation.

Mr. Graham, his counsel occupied an hour and a half in a hopeless task to shield his client from the doom of justice. Judge Davis calmly and dispassionately considered point after point of the argument, and concluded by saying "all these points must be overruled. The motion in arrest of judgment is denied." Then the prosecution through Mr. Tremain, moved that judgment be passed upon the prisoner, calling for a separate judgment upon each offence. In reply to this motion Mr. Graham started to his feet in amazement.

At last came the impressive scene of the arraignment for sentence, the humbled magnate of a great city standing defenceless before his judge and listening to his doom as one by one the years of his imprisonment were told off to him. His face was unmoved, but his hand clutched the chair-rail upon which he rested with a force that made the blue veins stand out like whip cords, and the chair shook until it rattled on the carpet. The sentence, aggregates twelve years imprisonment in the penitentiary and a fine of $12,500.00. At its conclusion the prisoner withdrew his eyes from the Judge, and for a moment looked around in a dazed or bewildered manner, and then sank into his seat. Then he lost all semblance of self-command, and sat bowed down to an almost shapeless mass, until he was aroused by a touch on the shoulder by the Deputy Sheriff. In obedience to this reminder he arose, and walked unsteadily into the clerk's office, adjoining the court-room.

Private letters received in Washington confirm the statements that for some time past the inhabitants of a portion of north-western Iowa, particularly within the counties of Lyon and Osceola, have been suffering severely from a lack of actual necessities of life, caused by the utter failure of the grain crop there last summer. These sufferers are in need of everything in the way of food, fuel and clothing. Several women have died from want.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued an order modifying the previous instructions in reference to the limited disbursements by the Treasury of silver coin in lieu of currency, so that hereafter, in making disbursements, silver coin will be paid only for the fractional part of a dollar, instead of in sums not exceeding five dollars, as heretofore.

A severe shock of earthquake, lasting fifteen seconds, was felt at Yreka, Cal., and Grove Creek, Oregon, Saturday night.

An Iowa politician ran for the office of School Superintendent against a woman. He got eight votes and she received two thousand.

At a meeting of workmen held on Saturday night in Philadelphia, resolutions were adopted deprecating war with Spain.

The drifts of snow in Quebec are in many places from eight to ten feet high, rendering the roads almost impassable.

Tweed in the Tombs.

William M. Tweed, through the indulgence of the Sheriff still remains in the Tombs, where he arrived on Sunday last. The District Attorney holds that there exists no reason, technical or otherwise, why Tweed should not by this time be in prison on Blackwell's Island. His detention in the Tombs depends upon the will of the Sheriff, over which the District Attorney has no control. The Sheriff has discretionary power in such matters, and the District Attorney cannot intervene, unless in the event of a case becoming so glaring as to render the Sheriff liable to be indicted for neglect of duty. Sheriff Brennan himself states that his reasons for allowing Tweed to remain temporarily in the Tombs is to afford the condemned man an opportunity of arranging his affairs before going to the Penitentiary.

The N. Y. Times, which was mainly instrumental in exposing and at length breaking up the Ring which ruled and plundered the city, comments as follows on the lenient courses pursued by the Sheriff:

Tweed was sentenced to imprisonment in the County Jail, and the Sheriff has got no more right to abridge that sentence by three days than he has to abridge it by three years. In the next place, Tweed is using his leisure apparently for the purpose of cheating the people of New York out of all chance of getting back a portion of the money which he has stolen. It would be just as "humane" for Sheriff Brennan to allow a burglar to hold a few days' levee of his pals in the Tombs, with the view of advantageously disposing of pilfered plate, as it is to allow Tweed the opportunity of bestowing on his relatives the property purchased out of the plunder of the City Treasury. The District Attorney is of opinion that there is a point at which Tweed's further detention in the Tombs may become a breach of official duty, and may subject the Sheriff to indictment. Has not that point been reached already?

A BOOK OF STARTLING INTEREST.

WHAT CAN SHE DO?

BY THE AUTHOR OF

"Barriers Burned Away."

DODD & MEAD, PUBLISHERS. ONE VOL. 12mo. PRICE $1.10.

"What an She Do?" is a Story of modern society; it depicts in the daughters of a wealthy family, reduced from great wealth to sudden poverty, the evils of a fashionable education, which only mocks in the hour of emergency, and leaves its victims peculiarly exposed to temptation: it further shows how the heroine struggles bravely through difficulties arising mainly from her defective education, and achieves success in a large field of labor in which but few women are yet employed. Thus making good the motto of the book

"Hail honest toil thy hard brown hand,
 May save the fairest in the land."
